

Make a Real Difference in the Lives of Others

Who is hiring Respite Provider and Direct Care workers

Individuals, families, and agencies throughout Nebraska are hiring respite providers and direct care workers - and they're using the Nebraska Resource and Referral System (NRRS)/respite to find people like you.

Positions are flexible and available on a part- or full-time basis, early mornings, days, evenings, overnights, and weekends. It is usually a family caregiver who hires a Network-screened respite provider to provide temporary care for a family member with special needs.

The people who hire you will be your employer and pay you directly, either privately or with funds authorized from a government program, such as the Lifespan Respite Subsidy. Agencies, individuals, or family of the care recipient will train you. All Network-screened respite providers are required to also complete the online respite training highlighted in this brochure.

Nebraska Lifespan Respite Network: Become part of a growing workforce

There is no greater gift than helping others.

What a Respite Provider or Direct Care worker does

Respite providers and direct care workers help people of all ages with disabilities and special healthcare needs do what everybody else does every day: work, play, and take part in community life.

People with disabilities may have different needs, but many rely on direct care workers or respite providers to help accomplish activities they want to do.

Respite Care is:

- ♥ Directed by the family
- ♥ Individualized to meet the needs of the care receiver and family
- ♥ Providing a meaningful experience for the care receiver

Care is provided:

- ♥ In the family's home
- ♥ The provider's home
- ♥ In a community facility or setting

Make a real difference in the lives of others

Respite and direct care workers make a real difference in the lives of other people by making it possible for them to live fuller, more rewarding lives.

When you become a respite provider you allow a family caregiver to take a break and recharge.

Find a job at no cost to you

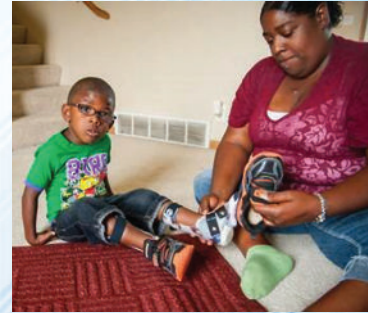

The Nebraska Resource and Referral System (NRRS)/respite is a free Department of Health & Human Services supported online service that helps respite providers and direct care workers find jobs with individuals, families, and provider agencies, needing someone to provide respite or direct care.

The NRRS/respite system shares the information you provide with individuals, families, and provider agencies looking to hire. Based on information you share on the application, families and care provider agencies will contact you for an interview. Respite Providers are required to complete a respite orientation, either online or request a paper version from your local Respite Coordinator.
