Cross-Cutting Themes & Considerations

- Placing the person and family at the center of all interactions
- Addressing trauma and its impact on families
- Advancing racial equity and support for family caregivers in underserved communities
- Understanding the implications of the direct care workforce

What the Strategy is...and is Not

The Strategy is...

- A vision and roadmap for change
- A baseline for action and progress
- A framework for all caregiving situations and experiences
- Intended for use by many stakeholder groups

The Strategy is not...

- A timeline or how-to document
- A list of requirements or “musts”
- Specific to any particular caregiving situation, topic or condition
- Exhaustive of all the possibilities

Most Importantly...It's the first...Not the last

A “Whole of Society” Approach is Needed

- States, tribes, county governments, and communities
 - Community-based providers of long-term services and supports
 - Child welfare agencies
 - Kinship support systems
 - Health care systems
 - Business leaders and employers
 - Communities of faith/faith-based organizations
 - National, state, regional and local philanthropic organizations and funders
 - Academic institutions and researchers
 - Advocates, family caregivers, care recipients, you, me, anyone!

- Nearly 600 unique respondents/1000+ responses
 - Majority of comment focused on Goal 3, followed by Goal 4
 - Raising awareness of family caregiving and its associated issues was also prominent
- Top priorities for future iterations of the Strategy to address:
 - Affordability, supply and quality of direct care work force
 - General need for additional services and supports
 - Caregiver training and education
- More specific actions for accountability by federal agencies
- More focus on the important role of states in implementing the Strategy
